

Who paid for your diamond?

Photo: Serge Giachetti

In 2002, Sierra Leone emerged from a devastating 10-year civil war, funded in large part by the “conflict” diamond trade. Hundreds of thousands of civilians were killed, mutilated and tortured, and innocent children were left without families or homes.

These children are still paying the price of war.

The All As One Children’s Center in Freetown is dedicated to sheltering and caring for the orphaned and destitute children of Sierra Leone, providing them an opportunity for a better future. To learn more about our work and how you can help, visit www.allasone.org.